There is a halt called in the construction, under Contractor Thomas, of the new engine house on Maryland avenue northeast, Acting Commander-in-Chief of G. A. R. to Building Inspector Brady made an inspection of the partly built structure and found that somebody had either entelessly or by design shifted the pegs placed by Surveyor Forsythe and that the form of the building had been thereby altered from rectangular to rhombold, and the original plans were not conformed to in the construction.

responsibility for the removal of the pegs in the ground outline. The first is that the surveyor made a mistake, and this is said to be possible; second, idle boys may have transpossible; second, idle boys may have trans-terred the pers after they were set, and that is believed to be quite probable; the third assumption is that Mr. Thomas, the con-tractor, may have not set them, but as it can make no possible difference to him in the matter of cost of construction, and as his rep-tantion as a builder is at stake, this is not given any credence. It is charged, however, that he was careless in not discovering the canner.

In his report as coroner for the year ended June 30, 1834, Dr. Woodward says when he assumed control of the office the regulation requiring many investigations to be made was seemingly a dead letter. On account of the amount of work thrown upon the coroner it had become the practice to issue death certificates in some cases without issue death certificates in some cases without issue death certificates in some cases without it wing the body. Believing that this method might be the means of covering crime, he refused to issue a certificate in any case in which he had not viewed the corpse.

He attributed to this resumption of the observance of the regulation the decrease in the number of still burths reported. The others servance of the regulation the decrease in the number of still births reported. The physi-cians to the poor being already overbur-dened, he resommends that they be relieved of the duty of making these examinations. Executive Board Reviews the Year's Work-Local Churches Have a Membership of 4,500, and Have Contributed $39,000 to Current Expenses and $15,000 for Charity.

The Baptists of Washington gathered in convention yesterday to hear reports of the financial and spiritual condition of the local churches, elect officers of their association, and to listen to interesting addresses in the interest of missions.

It was the opening day of the annual meeting of the Columbia Baptist Association, and the spacious auditorium of the Second Raptist Church was filled by the delegates and their friends.
